

Lillianfels – A History

Sir Frederick Matthew Darley was born in 1830 in Dublin, Ireland. He married his wife, Lucy Forest Brown, in December 1860, who was born in Melbourne. They met while she was traveling with her brother to England.

He arrived in Australia in 1862, on the advice of the Chief Justice of NSW who convinced him that he would further his career in the colony. Sir Frederick was knighted in 1887, and served five times as Lieutenant Governor of NSW, one such term spanning of the Commonwealth of Australia of 1901.

In 1888 Sir Frederick Darley purchased over 11 acres of land adjacent to Echo Point in Katoomba. He built a summer residence for the family over the year of 1889, designed by architect Varney Parkes (son of Henry Parkes).

The Darleys had seven children, five daughters and two sons, and it was Lilian, who died of tuberculosis at age 22, for whom the Katoomba property was named.

The property was used for a summer residence and nearly every noted visitor to Australia accepted the Darleys' hospitality enjoying the magnificent outlook. Royalty, Vice Royalty and Princes of Statesmanship, Jurisprudence, Science and Art came in to view the Mountains from the magnificent vantage point at Lillianfels.

Before his death, Sir Frederick sold Lillianfels to George Begg Vickery in 1908, and again over the next 4 years Lillianfels was used as a summer residence only. In 1912 Mr Albert A Kemp of Sydney purchased Lillianfels and for the first time the house was used as a permanent residence. Mr Kemp was the first to subdivide the original land parcel, and he sold the property in 1920.

Various owners followed, with the house retaining 2 acres of land. The period between 1923 and 1952 saw the property leased to various people as a guest house.

Escarpment Hotels purchased Lillianfels in 2010 and is committed to promoting the property as a premier 5-star hotel within a World Heritage Area.
